Kansas City PBS hires new community reporter

Kansas City, Missouri, Oct. 9, 2018 — Kansas City PBS is pleased to announce Vicky Diaz-Camacho as its new community reporter for Flatland KC, our digital magazine.

In this multimedia position, Diaz-Camacho will tackle a broad range of issues, including faith, education, and health. Most importantly, she will address those topics by answering questions from the community in her role as the primary reporter for KCPT's curiousKC initiative.

"We are thrilled to bring on Vicky as the new community reporter," said Online News Editor Mike Sherry. "She has a passion for telling stories that matter to the region."

Diaz-Camacho comes to KCPT from the Kansas City Business Journal, where she focused on data journalism and produced a weekly newscast for KCUR. Previously, she interned at the NPR Arts Desk and was an Alt. Latino contributor.
